The Brown Family

Hi, we are the Brown family. My name is Carolyn, my ex-husband Rick and I co-parent 3 children. Alex, our 22 year old daughter, Orion our 11 year old son and Michael my 27 year old autistic son from a previous marriage. We moved to Arlington, Oregon in 2012. Rick serves as a Peace Officer in the area and I provide care to patients at the Veterans Hospital in The Dalles.

In June of 2022 our world was forever changed. Alex started having issues with her hands and feet, she would lose her balance and have blackout moments. Her dad took her to Providence and while she was there, they found 2 lesions, one on her brain and one on her spine. She was diagnosed with Multiple Sclerosis. We've been seen by MCMC, Providence, Keiser Permanente and OHSU. A treatment plan has been created and with luck we hope to see positive results.

During Christmas, 2022, I noticed Orion had some issues with his legs and knees. The pain would come and go. In the beginning we thought it was just growing pains. But as the weeks went on, his pain increased, he would cry at school during any physical activities.

I tried to call his doctor who also suspected it was growing pains. The doctor told me if I was concerned, I should take him to urgent care or ER. I tried getting him into Urgent Care, we sat outside in the car for over 3 hours. We were told they were closing for the day and didn't have time to see Orion. They told me I could try again the next day they were open.

I explained to Rick the problem with Urgent Care. Rick drove Orion to Long View WA. from Vancouver where Orion could be seen immediately. Keiser Permanente examined Orion's leg. After an X-ray, they told Rick there was a mass in his right Tibia. The mass was consistent with Cancer. The next day Orion had an MRI of the area. The MRI and following blood tests confirmed it was cancer. In record time, Keiser Permanente coordinated with OHSU.

Within a week Orion was in surgery to biopsy the mass. This further identified the mass as Cancer. Specifically, Osteo Sarcoma, a very rare and aggressive form of Cancer which occurs maybe 1000 times a year in the US. Prior to the biopsy, Orion's leg buckled under his own weight. There was not enough bone left to support him. The tibia broke at the cancerous mass. Rick rushed him to the ER. Orion's pain was indescribable. Orion's screams in pain, his fear of death, all while he clung to Rick... may no parent ever experience that. It changed them both. Neither of them will ever forget that night.

The realization my baby boy had Osteosarcoma and could possibly lose his leg if not his life was like a knife to the heart. I felt like somehow, I didn't do everything I could as a mom to protect both my kids. How does this happen to two kids that were healthy and happy. Neither one of these diseases ran in either one of our families yet here we are being told he needed to start chemotherapy immediately.

The cost to fight Cancer is great. Orion had to be near a hospital. He had to be in a wheel chair accessible home and he had to be able to make many appointments. Rick needed a wheel chair, a wheel chair van, an ADA apartment and a collection of tests and scans we did not know existed. Rick took time away from his career to care for Orion full time. All this came at a huge financial cost.

Orion was living full time with Rick and I was commuting every day off to be with my son. Orion's chemo treatments included three weeks of hospital stays at OHSU every month. My days of work were filled with worry and my days off were spent in a hospital room watching my son battle cancer, chemo and every cough or cold waiting to attack his suppressed immune system.

Through it all we discovered the true secret of living in a small town. There isn't anything about a small town you can't learn in a day. But after a decade, the people there will always surprise you. Members of the Arlington Community, members of the medical community and Law Enforcement came together to raise funds for Orion. The proceeds helped with food, lodging and transportation.

Ultimately the surgeons agreed to replace Orion's bones with Titanium and attempt to save his right leg. So far, the surgery was successful. We don't know if his body will reject the artificial pieces. We don't know if he will walk without a walker or run like he used to. We don't know if he can keep his leg. Rick asked Orion if he wanted a robot leg, should it be necessary. Orion said it was ok if he had a robot leg. But he wanted Wi-Fi and he didn't want hackers to mess with his leg. Orion is rough as nails.

Orion will beat Cancer. We have no doubt. Alex will manage and thrive with MS. We have no doubt. It's been a difficult year. But there is nothing more resilient than the heart of a child. Nothing more determined than a boy who wants to run and a young woman who wants to live. While the expenses pile up and the fear only diminishes with time, these kids have all the guts they need.

Thank you to the people of the Columbia Gorge. There's no place else like it. No better people on Earth. May the Lord bless you and keep you safe. The Brown family.

The Dollarhide Family

Max was born on August 21st, 2016 with VACTERL Association. Minutes after he was born he was taken from his mom and put into the nursery to await the pediatrician as he stopped breathing several times right after birth. After several hours of testing, the family was informed of the extent of Max's problems. His stomach was not attached to his esophagus, instead it had attached itself to his trachea, he had no anus, and his spinal cord was attached to his spinal column instead of floating freely the way it should. They also found a small brain bleed, a heart issue, and a liver issue. The next morning Max had the first of many surgeries and procedures necessary to repair his body.

Even in kindergarten Mighty Max Dollarhide was such a joy to be around and could bring a smile to your face every day you got to teach him.

Max and his mom have had 3 trips back to Boston for multiple surgeries including Orchiopexy; A surgery to bring the testicle down into the scrotum, dental work because of the acid reflux he deals with destroying his teeth, and a glottic cyst removal which turned out to be a solid lump which made it easier to remove thankfully.

He continues to bring such joy to everyone he meets. He is such a pleasure to be around and from looking at his pictures, everyone on his plane rides got to experience this little guy's absolutely happy energy. He has named himself "The King of Hugs" and truly thrives on spreading love and happiness.

Even though he shows great grit though everything, he does have his moments of sadness and pain. He has started seeing pain management specialists at Doernbecher and started taking gabapentin which, while successful in controlling pain, unfortunately changed his mind set and mental health so had to be stopped.

Our hope is to bring a little bit of happiness to him and his family because even at 7 years old he understands the stress that is put on his family. They have struggled with job loss due to the amount of times they have had to rush Max to hospitals and surgeries. They have struggled with car mechanical difficulties this past year as well and having to reschedule appointments until cars or rides can be arranged. His mother Nicole recently began working again to help her family now that all her boys are in school but unfortunately Max's care still requires a lot of attention and she misses a lot of time at work for appointments and trips. She counts herself blessed to be employed by a fantastic community daycare that allows her to take the time she needs to care for Max appropriately without the worry of losing her job.

The Esophageal and Airway Treatment Center at Boston Children's Hospital is one of the only programs in the country specifically designed to care for children with all forms of esophageal atresia. Here is a look at part of the surgery that was being discussed to help Max be able to eat and swallow safely without damaging his lungs; Jejunal interposition is one of three surgical procedures that use portions of other organs to treat esophageal atresia in some children. In colon transposition, a piece of colon is moved and used as a replacement esophagus, while in gastric pull-up, the stomach is pulled up into the chest and connected directly to the top section of the esophagus. Unfortunately, Boston was not able to provide any of these options currently to help Max and the family withdrew care and is seeking and receiving help from another team at Cincinnati Children's hospital.

On Monday August 14th, 2023 the family loaded up and headed to the airport only to find their flight to Ohio had been canceled. Thankfully they were able to get a new flight. On Tuesday things were pretty crazy as they were shoved into 3 appointments they didn't even realize they would have.

On Thursday Max went into what was expected to be a 4-5 hour surgery at Cincinnati Children's Hospital. The team took Max back at 7:30am and the whole ordeal was not completed until 2:30pm. Unfortunately the surgery was more invasive than they planned and his incision was larger than expected. They had to spread his ribs significantly further than anticipated. Max's anatomy isn't normal and they encountered what they think was his right recurrent laryngeal nerve which got 'pretty beat up' according to the surgeon and may be significantly damaged.

Max was scheduled to be in CICU for five days, but on Friday night he was doing well enough to be moved into the step down unit. On Saturday he was able to get both chest tubes out, but was vomiting and was having trouble managing his secretions. Those two issues seem to have resolved but Max is currently having some issues with fluid on his lungs which may possibly delay his ability to come home in the expected time frame. On a positive note Max was able to stand up with assistance and get out of bed to use the restroom on his own. He even had a few bites of actual food without the feeling of choking on every bite!

This was anesthesia number 188 for Max! He is currently being monitored for possible pulmonary hypertension due to an enlarged pulmonary artery. Max will also need life-long care for his esophageal and airway issues.

Prayers are appreciated. Today August 21st, 2023 is Max's 7th birthday! Happy Birthday Max! They are expecting to be released to the Ronald McDonald House today. As soon as his lungs are healed and can safely fly on an airplane, they should be able to fly home!

Max and his family of 5 are blessed to be a part of the pig bowl this year. Let's all come alongside them as they continue to navigate through these hard times. # The Zistel Family

Hi, I'm Zander. My parents, Matt and Ashley Zistel married and settled down in The Dalles, Oregon in June of 2012. My dad has been working for the Oregon State Police for 15 years, and my mom stays at home to raise my siblings and I. She is always taking us to community events and local small businesses. They welcomed my brother, Zeke in 2016, my sister, Zoey in 2017, and completed their family with me in December of 2021.

My journey began while I was still in the womb. At my 20 week anatomy scan (in September), it was discovered that I had Dextro Transposition of the Great Arteries (D-TGA). This is a rare congenital heart defect in which the two main arteries in the heart aren't in their original place (transposed). In this situation, my un-oxygenated blood goes to the body instead of the lungs to pick the oxygen I need to sustain life. Basically, I can't survive outside the womb with this condition. After several fetal echocardiograms and doctor visits, it was planned for me to have open heart surgery a week after birth to correct my defect.

Unfortunately, at 28 weeks gestation, plans quickly changed when my mom went in for a routine OB appointment. It was discovered she had preeclampsia with severe features. She was immediately life-flighted to OHSU for monitoring. I know she was scared because while her pressures were rising mine were dropping. Due to the complexity of pregnancy, I was born via emergency C-Section on December 17th, 2021.

At just 3 pounds and 31 weeks, my odds were already stacked against me. Due to my itty bitty size, my open-heart surgery was postponed until I could gain enough weight to be operated on. Upon birth, I was immediately intubated and placed in the NICU for monitoring and respiratory support, not in my mommy's arms like I had hoped. As I attempted to gain weight, I had some setbacks. I experienced numerous complications, and was treated for several infections. In January I had my very first procedure. I guess it went well because everyone clapped when I returned to the NICU. I was so loved.

In February of 2022, I threw a curveball at my sweet Drs. and I almost didn't survive. They didn't love that! While it still remains unclear as to why, my oxygen saturations were persistently dropping to the 60's and even mid to low 30's. Despite all of the doctor's attempts, efforts, and ideas, I went into extreme respiratory failure. I was urgently transferred down to the PICU (pediatric floor, yay new friends) to be placed on ECMO (life support for heart and lungs) as a last resort to keep me alive. By nothing short of a miracle, and thousands (and I mean thousands) of prayers, I became stable enough to go forward with my operation two weeks later. My arterial switch happened on February 15th of 2022. The operation and recovery went better than expected, surprising both my surgical and cardiology teams. I was on my way to a full recovery, and able to come home to meet my siblings a month later.

Although there were several adjustments to home life as I still required medical attention,

I was thriving and loving every minute of it. At just 7lbs I was still the size of a newborn so my siblings carried me everywhere they went. I was the king of the castle and I ruled my peasants!

Things changed in March of 2023, when mom discovered behaviors that weren't my norm, and requested an urgent echocardiogram. While there, my doctors found that I had significantly high pressures in my heart and lungs. I underwent a cardiac catheterization procedure to measure the exact pressures in my heart. This revealed that I had severe Pulmonary Arterial Hypertension (PAH). PAH is high blood pressure in the blood vessels of the lungs, specifically the pulmonary arteries. When pulmonary arterial pressure rises, blood backs up into the heart causing right sided heart failure.

Upon returning from the Cath Lab, while everyone was deliberating and coming up with a new plan, My body had enough and started to decline. I quickly had worsening saturations, low blood pressure, and progressive lung impairment. I had two separate codes in which revival was successful. However, the doctors were concerned I wouldn't make it through another event.. The decision was made to place me on ECMO in the final attempt to get me stable. I was supported on ECMO while medications were given to treat pulmonary hypertension.

Several meetings and a new team of specialists sat my family down to discuss my diagnosis. In those meetings, my family learned that had I not been admitted when I was, I would have died at home within a month. God knew better and sent my mommy whispers, I love that she listens.

Currently I'm home, and I'm on a triple therapy management plan for my PAH. I require medication multiple times a day. Including a subcutaneous site. (an annoying tube that pumps a special medicine to my body. It does come with a cute fanny pack though). My mommy and I both cry when I require a new site. I also see my cardiology team every few months and have established a great relationship with them.

My diagnosis is ongoing, and my future remains unknown. I will need medical treatment for the remainder of my life. We are hopeful and prayerful that it's a long one. To make it to my adult years would be a true miracle. This talk makes my mommy cry so to offset the devastating reality, I am always on my best behavior! I am the cutest patootie's little boy around. You'll always find me laughing, smiling and demanding food. I love to giggle and run around and I'm perfectly content digging in the dirt. If you look at me, I probably look like any other one and a half year old boy.

My journey has been hard on everyone in my family. I've spent so much time getting prodded, poked, and familiar with my medical team. My parents have to worry, and take time off work or away from home and my siblings. My brother and sister don't get to see me or my parents when I am hospitalized. Although my journey isn't over, I am grateful to know that I have the best support system out there. Not everyone gets to say that. It's through hearts like yours that mine gets to continue to thrive.
